The Alcohol Crisis In America Has Been Overshadowed By Opioids, But Can No Longer Be Ignored

*Partnership for Drug Free Kids
February 28, 2019*

When talking about drug abuse and drug-related death in the U.S., most conversations and statistics do not include alcohol. Although alcohol is classified as a depressant, the amount consumed and type of alcohol determine the outcome and thus, most individuals think of it as separate from other drugs. But that doesn't change the impact that alcohol has on the body, the mind, or the shocking statistics of abuse and death that are attributed to alcohol use and abuse. In fact, many people use alcohol as either a substitute or a compliment to other kinds of drugs.

In fact, alcohol is the 3rd leading preventable cause of death in the United States, with an estimated 88,000 people (approximately 62,000 men and 26,000 women) dying from alcohol-related causes every year. Further, according to the 2015 National Survey on Drug Use and Health, 6.2% of adults over the age of 18 (more than 15 million) and 2.5% of 12-17 year olds (more than 600,00) have an alcohol use disorder.

However, new graphics created by the American Addiction Centers' River Oaks Treatment facility show just how significant – and different – state level use and abuse of alcohol and other drugs can be. Using CDC data from 2013-2017, the facility looked at per capita death rates from drugs and alcohol, tracking the percentage change from both causes for each year as well as the overall death rate.

White House Releases Resource Guide for Schools to Prevent Illicit Drug Use

CADCA News Roundup
(Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America)
March 28, 2019

Today, the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) released the Administration's school resource guide for teachers, administrators and staff to help educate and protect students from substance misuse.

"Getting through to students about the dangers of drug use before it's too late can make all the difference for millions of young Americans and their families. Helping educators identify warning signs at school, teaching our children about the negative effects of drug use, and getting students struggling with substance abuse the help they need are all critical to reversing the addiction crisis for the next generation," ONDCP Director Jim Carroll said.
